

REAL-LIFE FAIRY TALE IN CRISIS

WENDY MITCHELL
wendy.mitchell@lee.net

This is part two of a three part story of Makensie Hay Youngman, her battle with social anxiety disorder and the medical community, and her family coming to grips with the result.

Smart, attractive and always sporting a smile, a fairy-tale future seemed almost certain for Makensie Hay Youngman.

Near a photo display of a happy young woman in a horse-drawn carriage on her wedding day, apparently on the upside of her life, Makensie's mother, Sharon Hay has a stack of papers documenting her daughter's emotional and mental medical treatment which goes back more than a decade.

"We thought she had come through the worst of it; she had graduated at the top of her class, finished college and married Ashley," Sharon Hay said. "It had been about seven years since she had tried to hurt herself"

Makensie suffered from social anxiety disorder for years, an affliction which manifested itself in her as a subdued panic and depressed feelings she was not meeting the expectations of others, her mother said.

It first appeared during her junior year in high school, when she tried to overdose on pills, her mother said.

"Makensie was not visibly manic when it was bad; she was almost the opposite. She was extremely in thought when she fought the dark," Hay said. "She avoided drawing attention to herself and tried to hide what was bothering her."

Those actions hindered getting medical treatment, Hay said.

According to medical websites, "social anxiety disorder is the most common anxiety disorder and the third most common mental disorder in the U.S., after depression and alcohol dependence. An estimated 19.2 million Americans have social anxiety disorder. The disorder most often surfaces in adolescence or early adulthood, but can occur at any time, including early childhood. It is more common in women than in men."

Despite her fear, and the side effects of medication, Makensie graduated second in the Class of 2002 from Bracken County High School and even delivered a speech at graduation.

"I asked her how she did that

and she told me it was because she had every word written down in front of her," Hay said.

A single-vehicle accident on U.S. 62 resulted in power being disrupted in the Washington area for approximately an hour Saturday afternoon. The driver of the vehicle was transported to Meadowview Regional Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries.

WASHINGTON-AREA SINGLE-VEHICLE CRASH DAMAGES ELECTRIC LINES

MARLA TONCRAY

Power was disrupted to homes, businesses and traffic lights in the Washington area Saturday afternoon after a SUV hit an electric pole.

The accident occurred around 1:45 p.m., in the 700 block of U.S. 62, just west of the intersection of U.S. 68 and U.S. 62.

Officials at the scene said the brown Chevy Blazer was traveling east on U.S. 62 when the driver apparently suffered a medical seizure and left the roadway on the right hand side. The Blazer struck a Kentucky Utilities electric pole, resulting in damage to the transformer and downed power lines. A Columbia Gas Company gas meter was also struck by the vehicle as it traveled through the yard of a home at 706 U.S. 62.

The driver was identified as 18-year-old Kyle Soister, a senior at Mason County High School by his father, Ernie Soister who was at the scene. Ernie Soister confirmed his son had a medical seizure while driving the vehicle. Ernie Soister returned to the scene of the accident to retrieve his son's belongings from the Blazer after his son was admitted to Meadowview Regional Medical Center. Kyle Soister is reported to be in stable condition, with non-life-threatening injuries.

Power was out in the area from Tucker Drive to U.S. 62 for approximately an hour while crews from KU repaired power lines at the scene of the accident. Columbia Gas also had personnel on scene to shut off gas to the area.

The Maysville Police Department, Maysville Fire Department and Mason County Sheriff's Office and Maysville EMS responded to the scene.

Foundation formed to find grants for schools

KAREN STEIN
karen.stein@lee.net

MANCHESTER, Ohio | The Manchester Education Foundation is a non-profit group whose goal is to promote education and healthy students in Manchester's schools by an ongoing search for funds through grants and donations.

"We want to continue to build a better future for all of our students and community. To do this, money is needed to help offset and compliment the school district," Karen Ballengee, board member and school treasurer, said. The foundation can take donations that are tax deductible for any person and entity since it recently became a 501(c)(3) non-profit, according to MEF reports.

Board member Mike Cluxton said anyone donating may also designate where they want the money to go in the schools.

Ballengee spends a great deal of her time searching and applying for grants for the schools and the new school-based health center.

She said she recently applied for grants from Walmart that could pay thousands to help ongoing funding for the large after-school programs the school operates.

The after-school program is currently operating in its third year through a five-year 21st Century Community Learning Centers grant. The first three years, the district received $200,000 to be used each year, then the fourth year it will go down to $150,000, and finally $100,000 will be available for the fifth year.

Battle over Obama health care law reaches Supreme Court

MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | The monumental fight over a health care law that touches all Americans and divides them sharply comes before the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday. The justices will decide whether to kill or keep the largest expansion in the nation's social safety net in more than four decades.

Two years and three days after President Barack Obama signed into law a health care overhaul aimed at extending medical insurance to more than 30 million Americans, the high court begins three days of hearings over the law's validity.

The challenge from 26 states and a small business group puts the court smack in the middle of a heavily partisan fight over the president's major domestic accomplishment and a presidential election campaign in which all his Republican challengers oppose the law.

If upheld, the law will force dramatic changes in the way insurance companies do business, including forbidding them from denying coverage due to pre-existing medical conditions and limiting how much they can charge older people.

The law envisions that insurers will be able to accommodate older and sicker people without facing financial ruin because of its most disputed element, the requirement that Americans have health insurance or pay a penalty.

Another major piece of the law is an expansion of the government-funded Medicaid program for low-income Americans that will provide coverage to more than 15 million people who currently earn too much to qualify.

FROM A1

During her first foray into college life, at Georgetown College, Makensie tried overdosing again while at home, her mother said.

“After that time, she promised me she would never overdose again,” Sharon Hay said.

She took classes at Maysville Community and Technical College, then enrolled in the University of Kentucky.

Having her brother and another as roommates at college in Lexington helped, Sharon Hay said.

Obtaining a degree in biology at UK, Makensie had equipped herself to better understand her feelings and the medicines she was prescribed to keep the darkness in check.

Makensie eventually got a job close to home.

In March 2011, Makensie was on a leave of absence from her job, trying to give her body, on a new regime of medication, time to adjust.

“Unfortunately some of the medications have side effects, like thoughts of suicide, stomach problems and nightmares. Sometimes she was so worried going to work that she would come back home,” Sharon Hay said.

In early March 2011, her dark feelings were intense, so Makensie and her husband tried to get her admitted to medical facilities.

“She went on the internet and researched where a program that may work for her would be,” Sharon Hay said.

Willing to endure an electroshock therapy program, Makensie turned to her doctor for assistance in getting treatment.

On March 7, 2011, her doctor prescribed admission to Lindner Center of Hope, a facility in Cincinnati, her mother said.

“The doctor had even had his office call before they went, requesting she be admitted,” Sharon Hay said.

A comment from her doctor before her attempt to get in the center still bothers Makensie’s father.

“He told her it was hard to get into the facility and that you almost had to arrive with your wrists slit to get admitted,” Gary Hay said.

“Who says that to someone with her history?”

When she arrived, the appearance of the facility gave Makensie hope, her mother said.

According to Sharon Hay, Makensie, sitting in the waiting room with her suitcase, told Ashley, “This might be the place.”

GRANT

FROM A1

All funds must be spent for this program, according to MEF reports.

The after-school program offers free teacher supervised tutoring in the morning and help with homework after school. This also helps parents who have to go to work early or come home late, Ballengee said. Additionally, the program operates every weekday for two and half hours after school with activities like archery and many other physical programs, and a snack. The program averages participation from 100 students each day, then the grant pays to have the children bused home, which is another help to working parents, she said.

Ballengee said she hopes to re-apply for funds for the next five-year cycle, if they are available.

Most grants have a money match that is needed to even apply so the board recently purchased a banner maker for $6,500 with a loan. The large printer will be used as a fund-raiser as well as a service for the school and the community, Cluxton said. Sales from banners should help pay the loan and to increase an account that will be used for matching funds needed for future grants. The banner maker can print any size, 6-20 feet.

MEF also searches for ongoing funding for its health center. It is currently operated with a $350,000 grant from The Health Foundation of Greater Cincinnati to staff and fund the center for the next four years. Additionally, HRSA gave a $500,000 grant to build a new 2,400-square-foot addition to Manchester School campus.

To staff the center, Adams County Regional Medical Center employs a nurse practitioner and an aide for four hours a day, five days a week and mental health services are available two days a week. At this time the center is self-sustaining, according to MEF reports.

Once the new center opens in 2013, residents of the community can also utilize health services, which are expected to include dental and vision care. HFGC is also offering a matching grant for donations to insure the continued success of the center, according to MEF reports.

Another goal the foundation is pursuing is funding for a school and community wellness center to promote better health and fight obesity, Cluxton said.

HEALTH LAW

FROM A1

By 2019, about 95 percent of the country will have health insurance if the law is allowed to take full effect, the Congressional Budget Office estimates.

About 50 million Americans currently lack health insurance coverage.

Reams of court filings attest that the changes are being counted on by people with chronic diseases, touted by women who have been denied coverage for their pregnancies, and backed by Americans over 50 but not yet old enough to qualify for Medicare, who face age-inflated insurance premiums until they become eligible for the government’s health insurance program for seniors at age 65.

Republicans are leading the fight to kill the law either by the court or through congressional repeal. They say the worst fears about what they derisively call “Obamacare” already have come to pass in the form of higher costs and regulations, claims that the law’s supporters dispute. All the Republican presidential candidates promise to repeal the law if elected.

“Obamacare has already proven unpopular and unaffordable,” House Speaker John Boehner said on the law’s second anniversary last week.

Polls have consistently shown the public is at best ambivalent about the benefits of the health care law, and that a majority of Americans believe the mandatory insurance requirement is unconstitutional.

The administration’s public education campaign has come under strong criticism from its allies who say the White House has been timid in the face of relentless Republican attacks.

Washington lawyer Walter Dellinger, who served in the Clinton administration Justice Department, said opponents have succeeded in keeping the focus on the insurance requirement instead of two provisions that will keep insurers from discriminating against sicker and older people. “The other two are very popular, and no one discusses them,” Dellinger said.

The White House has belatedly begun touting parts of the law already in effect, including allowing children to stay on their parents’ insurance plan until age 26 and reducing older Americans’ prescription drug costs.

Having rarely talked about the law since he signed it, Obama issued a brief statement Friday. “The law has made a difference for millions of Americans, and over time, it will help give even more working and middle-class families the security they deserve.”

The main event before the court is Tuesday’s argument over the constitutionality of the individual insurance requirement. The states and the National Federation of Independent Business say Congress lacked authority under the Constitution for its unprecedented step of forcing Americans to buy insurance whether they want it or not.

The administration argues Congress has ample authority to do what it did. If its action was rare, it is only because Congress was dealing with a problem that has stymied Democratic and Republican administrations for many decades: How to get adequate health care to as many people as possible, and at a reasonable cost.

The justices also will take up whether the rest of the law can remain in place if the insurance mandate falls and, separately, whether Congress lacked the power to expand the Medicaid program.

The court also will consider whether the challenge is premature under a 19th century tax law because the insurance requirement doesn’t kick in until 2014 and people who remain uninsured wouldn’t have to pay a penalty until they file their 2014 income taxes in early 2015.

Taking this way out of the case would relieve the justices of rendering a decision in political high season, just months before the presidential election.

The justices like to say they give the same attention to the small cases as the big ones. But everything about the court’s handling of health care suggests there is no doubt among the court’s six men and three women about the significance of what they are about to decide.

The six hours of argument time is the most scheduled since the mid-1960s. The court will release audio recordings of the arguments on the same day they take place. The first time that happened was when the court heard argument in the Bush v. Gore case that settled the 2000 presidential election. The last occasion was the argument in the Citizens United case that wound up freeing businesses from longstanding limits on political spending.

Outside groups filed a record 136 briefs dealing with the four issues the court will take up over the next three days.

Lawmakers in final stretch of lackluster session

ROGER ALFORD
Associated Press

FRANKFORT | A contentious month-long debate over political redistricting left scant time for Kentucky lawmakers to tackle a long list of bills, many of which will likely fall to the wayside in the final days of the 2012 legislative session.

So far, four of the 786 bills filed this year have been signed into law by Gov. Steve Beshear.

I honestly have to say not a lot has been accomplished."

HOUSE REPUBLICAN WHIP DANNY FORD

That includes a bill redrawing the state's legislative districts that the Kentucky Supreme Court has already declared unconstitutional.

With six days remaining, lawmakers have largely turned their attention to negotiating final terms of a two-year, $19.5 billion state budget.

"I honestly have to say not a lot has been accomplished," said House Republican Whip Danny Ford of Mount Vernon. "Our time is very short. I hope that we can get a budget. I think the people expect that of us, and I hope we can meet those expectations."

Budget negotiators from the House and Senate are scheduled to begin talks Monday to hammer out final details of the budget that calls for massive cuts to agencies across state government. They hope to have an agreement before the end of the week.

Vets pay respect, time after time

KAYLEIGH ZYSKOWSKI
Associated Press

FRANKFORT | When the phone rings at the Frankfort Veterans of Foreign Wars Post on Second Street, 85-year-old Charlie Mauer answers it.

On the other end is not a question about the day's soups or the next bingo night, but a request for the VFW Post 4075 Honor Guard to pay final respects to a fellow veteran.

It's a call Mauer, Honor Guard commander, has been answering for years, and he's honored to take it.

K.B. Johns, Ralph Spooner, Bill Hampton and Mauer — the only living original member — founded the first VFW Post 4075 Color Guard in the early 1950s.

Within the next decade they were able to support a full Honor Guard, which takes at least 11 members: two flag folders, seven riflemen, one bugler and one leader.

Four of the current members are World War II veterans, and the rest served in Vietnam, Korea, Desert Storm and Operation Iraqi Freedom. They are from different generations, but the men say they share the same respect for each other.

"We've got a good bunch of guys," Mauer said.

Mauer, a World War II veteran, says serving the community and paying tribute to Frankfort veterans is something he's glad to do. And because he grew up in Frankfort, he knows many of those who've died, which makes the job more important to him.

Several days after the call comes in, Mauer arrives at the post ready to greet the other members and prepare the equipment.

"We don't get paid," says World War II veteran Jim Wolcott, "other than a free lunch and a beer."

The men arrive wearing dark blue uniforms decorated with gold cords, white gloves and polished black shoes.

Ohio family has four overseas at same time

Associated Press

MANSFIELD, Ohio | The upcoming deployment of an Ohio Army National Guard unit will mean especially tough goodbyes for one woman whose three sons and their cousin are headed to Afghanistan.

Kevin and Hilda Painter's home in Mansfield has a flag on the porch with four blue stars, one for each relative headed overseas: 20-year-old Pfc. Brandon Painter, 24-year-old Sgt. Mark Prince and 29-year-old Staff Sgt. Leo Prince, and their cousin, 24-year-old Sgt. Coty Prince. The men are among about 170 soldiers from a Mansfield-area transportation unit that is being deployed for a year and will have a call to duty ceremony Tuesday morning at Ashland University.

"It'll be hard leaving family, but we'll still have family together, so it should make it a lot easier," Coty Prince told WKYC-TV in Cleveland.

The men say they're ready to go, but also eager to finish their work and return safely to their wives, girlfriends and children. It's Brandon Painter's first deployment, but the other three previously deployed to Iraq.

"I don't know what to expect with this one," Leo Prince said. "Like the second time, I knew I could help these guys, let them know what to expect. This time, it's new for all of us."

Mark and Coty had followed Leo's lead into the service, Brandon Painter said, "and I was like, I better jump on the bandwagon." All four are truck drivers with the unit. Hilda Painter said she feels good that her sons are willing to serve, and she attended a weekend gathering of soldiers at a local Veterans of Foreign Wars post with brave smile, The News Journal of Mansfield reported.

"I just have to live in my own little world and know they're going to be OK," she told the television station.

Kevin Painter sees it as a benefit that the four relatives are together through the experience.

"They're just a group of that love to be together, and they go as a unit, and they defend our country," he said.

Ohio program links criminals, positive life influences

MARK CURNUTTE
Associated Press

AVONDALE, Ohio | This Cincinnati neighborhood, where 11 murders took place last year, will be the first in the country to try a groundbreaking anti-violence program that uses a relatively simple approach.

The Moral Voice program involves people of influence in the lives of criminals to speak to them, to encourage them to stop shooting and selling drugs and offer real help if they do.

Cincinnati Police and Avondale leaders unveiled details of Moral Voice to about 75 residents at a Council Public Safety Committee meeting recently.

"We recognize that it's not Avondale that has the problem. It is a few individuals in Avondale who have the issues," said Dorothy Smoot, executive director of the Police Partnering Center and chief program officer at the Urban League of Greater Cincinnati.

POLICE LOOK FOR CLUES IN ROADSIDE DEATH

LEXINGTON | Police in Lexington are searching for a vehicle that was involved in what appears to be a deadly hit-and-run accident.

Police Lt. Raymond Roller told the Lexington Herald-Leader that a passerby reported finding the victim early Saturday on the side of Leestown Road.

The Fayette County Coroner's Office said on Sunday that 57-year-old Gary Akers died from multiple blunt force trauma injuries.

Police say anyone with information about Akers' death is asked to call the Lexington Division of Police at (859) 258-3600. — AP

OHIO COUNTY SPEEDS UP FOOD STAMP PROCESSING

CINCINNATI | The Cincinnati-area county that was the worst in Ohio at processing food stamp applications on time has improved its performance, and a neighboring county has taken over the bottom spot on the list.

The applications are supposed to be processed within 30 days, and the delays upset advocates for people who were going hungry.

Hamilton County officials said funding cuts and layoffs caused the delays.

The Cincinnati Enquirer reports the county added staff and is now meeting the requirement with 86 percent of applications, roughly doubling its rate from late last year.

Butler County now has the poorest performance after losing one-third of its staff last year.

It processed just 44 percent of food stamp applications on time last month but is restructuring to help clear the backlog. — AP

OHIO MAN'S FAMILY GETS MEDALS FOR HIS WWII SERVICE

LIMA, Ohio | Relatives of an Ohio man who served in the Army during World War II have received a Bronze Star and other medals he earned but never received before he died nearly 17 years ago.

The Lima News reports Sen. Rob Portman presented the medals Saturday to the family of Clarence Zickafoose.

Those on hand included the soldier's grandson, Lt. Col. Matthew Zickafoose, who was on leave from an Air Force base.

Jerry Zickafoose said his father was a quiet man who didn't talk much about the war.

He said his father never would have asked for the medals but would have been humbled and honored to receive them. — AP

COLUMBUS MICRO-DISTILLERY IS FIRST TO GET NEW PERMIT

COLUMBUS, Ohio | A central Ohio micro-distillery has become the first such business in the state to benefit from a new law allowing sales of samples in the businesses' tasting rooms.

Columbus-based Watershed Distillery received the new liquor permit created by House Bill 243 last week, The Columbus Dispatch reported.

The law allows micro-distilleries to operate similarly to wineries.

"This is huge for us," said Watershed co-owner Greg Lehman. "We haven't really been able to promote tours the way we could."

Under the previous law, Lehman's business would have to send tour groups to a liquor store a half-mile away if they wanted to buy a bottle of gin or vodka, or even taste some.

"Now, people will be able to taste our product and see if they like it," said Dave Rigo, Watershed co-owner. — AP

SESSION

FROM A3

Senate President David Williams, R-Burkesville, said he is “very concerned” about the tight deadline lawmakers are working under to get the budget completed. He said Senate and House negotiators have to resolve all their differences by late Wednesday night.

House Speaker Greg Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, said he’s confident the House and Senate will reach an agreement.

“I don’t think we’ll reach an impasse,” he said.

The fate of most bills are in question, including one that would provide some Appalachian students with financial grants of up to $6,000 a year to help them earn degrees from private colleges in the mountain region.

The proposal is a spinoff from an earlier recommendation to turn the private University of Pikeville into a public university to boost educational levels and spur the economy in central Appalachia. Widespread opposition led to that idea being withdrawn.

The proposed scholarships would be paid for using revenue from an existing tax on mined coal. Proponents believe generating more college graduates would make the impoverished central Appalachian region more appealing to businesses looking to build or relocate.

The Senate stripped money for that program out of the budget. Stumbo said the House will press to put it back, saying he sees that scholarship program as one of the more important proposals of the legislative session.

“What you have to remember is times are tough, and there’s not a lot of money in the budget,” Stumbo said. “And when there’s no extra money, it’s difficult to have many major pieces of legislation, but most of them require some form of funding.”

The House and Senate still are working on legislation intended to curb meth production and to crack down on unscrupulous doctors who overprescribe painkillers. That, too, is one of the top priorities of the legislative session, but lawmakers have disagreed on how to proceed.

The meth proposal would limit the amount of cold and allergy medications that people can buy in an attempt to limit access to pseudoephedrine, a key ingredient in meth. That proposal has been staunchly opposed by consumer groups.

The Amish are hoping lawmakers will pass legislation that would allow them to forgo a longstanding traffic safety measure in the name of religious freedom.

A bill awaiting passage would allow the Amish to use strips of reflective tape on the backs of their horse-drawn buggies rather than bright orange triangles some object to. The Amish argue that God directs their safety, even on the roads. They say the bright color of the signs calls attention to them, which is against their religion, and the triangular shape represents the Trinity, which they’re not allowed to flaunt.

State Sen. Ken Winters, R-Murray, filed the legislation because several Amish men in his western Kentucky district were jailed for refusing to pay fines for not using the orange signs. They have appealed their convictions to the Kentucky Supreme Court, which has not yet ruled.

The bill has cleared the Senate and is awaiting a floor vote in the House.

Another bill important to retired prosecutors would have special privileges to carry concealed weapons anywhere in the state under a measure that has passed the House.

Democratic state Rep. Bob Damron of Nicholasville still is pressing for a bill that extends to commonwealth’s attorneys and county attorneys the same right that already has been given to retired judges. The measure is intended to allow retired prosecutors to defend themselves if attacked, even inside the state’s courthouses.

Kentucky already allows people to carry concealed weapons if they have permits to do so. Damron’s measure would allow retired prosecutors to carry them into restricted areas where the general population wouldn’t be permitted to carry guns.

Lawmakers also have been rushing to get legislation through to provide sales tax relief for victims of the March 2 tornadoes that caused massive damage across Kentucky.

Rep. Will Stacy, D-West Liberty, is championing the measure. His eastern Kentucky district was especially hard hit. Most of West Liberty’s downtown was demolished by a twister.

VETERANS

FROM A3

They shuffle into the game room of the VFW where the rifles are stored in a locked cabinet.

After they are prepared to leave for the funeral service, the group stands in the doorway teasing each other about their weight and asking the kitchen crew what’s for lunch.

There’s no need for practice or rehearsal; each man knows his role because the group has done it so often.

The group has attended as many as three funerals in one day, Mauer says, but the number is usually several per month. Over the years, they have provided services for hundreds of funerals.

The men have braved every kind of weather for funerals, and this morning is chilly and rainy. Luckily, they’ve heard the sky will clear before the service starts.

The 11 men divide into separate vehicles and make their way up East Main Street to Frankfort Cemetery.

As they wait for the family to arrive at the cemetery’s chapel, Charlie Hinds asks Burnett Napier, “What are you doing lately?”

“As little as possible,” Napier jokes.

Both Napier and Hinds are World War II combat veterans — Napier in the Marines and Hinds in the Army.

By 19, Napier was fighting in one of the Marine’s deadliest battles in the Pacific on Peleliu Island with the 1st Marine Division.

It was September 1944 when Napier ended up on the coral island fighting against the Empire of Japan. He was a corpsman, or medic, when he ran to the side of a fallen Marine, performed first aid on the man under machine gun fire before carrying him to safety.

Shrapnel hit him later in the same battle, and he suffered a concussion.

Napier, an Honor Guard member for 15 years, received the Purple Heart and the Silver Star while in combat on the island, which is present day Palau Islands.

“They didn’t stay in one place for too long. I was all over the Pacific,” he said.

“According to the citation, a Marine was caught in cross fire with machine guns, and, according to the citation, I administered first aid under fire and carried him back to relative safety,” Napier said.

Charlie Hinds, 88, has been a member of the Honor Guard for about 16 years.

He served in seven campaigns and was an Army scout for Gen. George Patton for two years.

“He wasn’t a really nice guy; he wouldn’t ever come up and want to know about you personally,” Hinds said about Patton.

“He just wanted to tell you what to do, but he was a good general.”

Hinds and his brother enlisted after graduating from high school because his father didn’t have enough money to send him to school. He was 18 years old.

“With about two weeks left in the war, I was the only (one) left in my platoon,” Hinds said.

Family members of the deceased begin to arrive at Frankfort Cemetery. Vince LaFontaine — who has played in hundreds of Frankfort funerals since he was a teenager — warms up with scales, and the men take their positions.

The weather predictions were correct. The sky clears, the sun comes out and the air warms in time for the ceremony to begin.

Mauer stands in the doorway of the cemetery chapel where about 15 members of the deceased veteran’s family sits. He signals the riflemen after the flag is precisely folded.

“Ten-hut,” he says sternly.

The seven riflemen fire three shots that echo over the cliff and around South Frankfort before silence takes over, and the bugler plays taps.

“I’ve heard taps over a thousand times it seems, but it’s always emotional for me,” Wolcott says back at the VFW over a lunch of beef stew and corn bread.

Mauer says he never gets used to hearing taps played, either.

BONES THAT FORM THE MOUTH

Q: How many bones shape the mouth?

A: The mouth is formed by five principal bones. The lower jaw is a single bone, which is called the mandible. It is the densest and strongest bone in the human skull. When your mouth opens and closes it is only the mandible that moves. Two bones called the maxillae form the upper jaw. The maxillae extend upward from the teeth to the bases of the cheek and nose bones. And two more bones form the roof of the mouth, also called the palate. Those two bones are the palatine bones.

The palatine bones, like other bones of the cranium, are joined by a thin strip of connective tissue called a suture. Through infancy and childhood, the suture is flexible and stretches easily. It becomes stronger and more rigid in adolescence. Ideally, the arches of the maxilla and the mandible will match closely in size and shape. Sometimes, though, because of genetics, they don't. This can result in a condition known as malocclusion, which means that a person's bite - where the upper and lower teeth meet - is off. Talk with your dentist about the components of your mouth and find out how you can keep all of them healthy and working right.

made Ridgeway Avenue and Carplin Place the hottest of Avondale's crime hot spots.

Moral Voice is one of three parts of the Cincinnati Initiative to Reduce Violence (CIRV), an anti-crime program started in 2007.

The Urban League and Ohio Justice and Policy Center are two of the agencies poised to help. Avondale's Moral Voice program is the first nationally directed by the community, said program creator David Kennedy, a New York City criminologist.

"The moral voice is that of the community, of Avondale, and the message is that we need you to understand the pain you are causing, we need for you to reject violence, and we are here to help you get out and find a better life," Kennedy said in a phone interview with the Enquirer.

If the offenders don't accept help, they will be the subject of intense police attention.

If the approach works in Avondale, Moral Voice will be used in other Cincinnati neighborhoods, say CIRV and Cincinnati Police, who chose Avondale as the first site because of the commitment of community leaders to address violence and recent improvements in the overall crime rate.

Cincinnati Police Chief James Craig said at this time last year Avondale had experienced three homicides and eight shootings, compared to just one shooting this year. Yet about an hour after Craig spoke at the recreation center, a 4-year-old boy was caught in crossfire and wounded in the leg, just one block north of the Ridgeway hot spot.

Avondale and Over-the-Rhine led the city with 11 homicides each in 2011.

"This is about helping a community in crisis with gun violence," said Eliot Isaac, a Cincinnati Police captain and commander of District 4, which includes Avondale.

Moral Voice organizers, which include the police, the Urban League and new Avondale Comprehensive Development Corp., will evaluate results in June.

"How many people will have decided to change direction?" Smoot said.

Evelyn Manuel, a 32-year-old married mother of five children, is hoping that her 17-year-old son, Romello Wheeler, decides to turn his life around. She last saw him this past summer and is now hoping a new anti-violence initiative can locate him and pull him away from a life of crime before it's too late. She fears for his life.

"He's been lured to the streets, and he wants to be a part of it," Manuel said.

Manuel, a nurse who grew up on Ridgeway Avenue in Avondale but now lives in Northside, thinks her son might be among the 15 to 20 offenders that Moral Voice could reach in the next couple of months.

Early storms fuel awareness

Associated Press

PADUCAH | Recent destructive storms in Kentucky may help the public be more aware of the potential threat of severe weather as spring begins.

National Weather Service meteorologist Christine Wielgos told The Paducah Sun that bad storms make people more aware of risks posed by the weather.

She said she doesn't believe frequent alerts about possible severe storms desensitize people.

"People are more aware of risks because of some bad storms happening here and in their backyards," Wielgos said. "The storms' intensity and frequency are increasing, and people know it."

McCracken County emergency management director Paul Carter said he thought awareness of storm danger had increased in western Kentucky since a tornado hit in 2011 in nearby Joplin, Mo., and killed 160 people.

"There were lessons learned," Carter said. "We try to stay off the sirens to avoid complacency. We want to make sure there is an acute threat before we start setting off the sirens around the county. So far, that has been very successful."

Carter said bad weather is always a possibility — twisters were spotted last week in western McCracken County and there was widespread damage in 2007 when high winds from the remnants of Hurricane Ike blew through the area.

He said when bad weather strikes, people should "use common sense. If there is a possibility of a bad storm, pay attention to all media and rely on warnings."

Wielgos recommended that residents get weather radios and that will give them warnings for counties to the west. Storms most often move from west to east in the area, she said.

Brad Jackson, a Radio Shack manager at Kentucky Oaks Mall, says weather radios are selling better this year than they before spring last year.

"Any time there's bad weather, weather radios become the No. 1 purchase," Jackson said.

Louisville Youth Orchestra hitting right notes

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE | At a time when many professional orchestras are struggling, the Louisville Youth Orchestra seems to have hit the right note with musicians and fans.

Louisville Youth Orchestra executive director Melody Welsh-Buchholz told The Courier-Journal that its members have doubled in the last decade. She attributes the increase to a decline in music instruction at schools.

The orchestra has hit a number of milestones over recent years.

It was one of five groups chosen in 2006 to perform Joan Tower's "Made in America," which later won a Grammy Award. In 2008, it got to perform a new score by Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Joseph Schwantner entitled "Chasing Light ..."

The next year, it was one of four ensembles chosen to perform the new work "Skyline Dances," by composing prodigy Jay Greenberg.

Some of the new pieces were commissioned under a program of the Ford Motor Company Fund, a philanthropic organization of the company.

Orchestra artistic director Jason Seber said members are not only able to work with accomplished young musicians, they also have the chance to reach unexpected audiences.

In 2010, the Louisville Youth Orchestra played with My Morning Jacket at the KFC Yum Center and Seber said the group likely reached some who hadn't ever heard a live orchestral performance.

"So many people joined our Facebook page and left comments," he said. "Part of orchestras succeeding — and I think it starts with youth orchestras — is reaching out to other people who normally would not come and see an orchestra perform and devising inventive collaborations that are different."

Seber and Welsh-Buchholz said learning a piece of music and being able to perform it in front of an audience is only part of what members are taught. They also learn about being a good citizen.

"It's about being responsible and committed to something, having a hard-work ethic and understanding teamwork," Seber said. "An orchestra is like a microcosm of society, different people of different religions, races, educational and income levels, everything."

Alan Ohkubo, who is now a senior at Indiana University's School of Music and plays the cello, had only praise for the program where he used to be a member.

"I had the opportunity to learn and perform great symphonic literature," he said.

As Seber and Welsh-Buchholz look to the future, they said they want to have more performances with popular bands and in other areas of the city, including western and southern Louisville.

"I want to get out to places that have less orchestral exposure," Seber said.

BLUEGRASS BATTLE IN THE BIG EASY

CATS AND CARDS TO MEET IN FINAL FOUR AFTER KENTUCKY HANDLES BEARS 82-70

PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press

ATLANTA | Kentucky is taking its highlight show back to the Big Easy. With an NBA-like display from a young team filled with future pros, the top-seeded Wildcats advanced to the Final Four for the second year in a row with a 82-70 blitzing of Baylor in the South Regional final on Sunday.

Michael Kidd-Gilchrist scored 19 points, Anthony Davis added 18 points and 11 rebounds, and Terrence Jones dazzled in all the overlooked areas, leading the Wildcats (36-2) to a Bluegrass showdown with rival Louisville in the national semifinals next Saturday at New Orleans. For all the hoopla sure to surround that game in the basketball-crazed state, Kentucky won't consider the season a success unless it wins two more games — culminating in a national title.

"This team is playing for you and playing for each other," coach John Calipari told the predominantly blue-clad crowd when it was over. "Let's see if we can keep this thing rolling a bit."

This group sure has the look of a champion, shaking off an early blow by the Bears (30-8) — a very good team with a daring fashion sense that was simply no match for Calipari's latest group of Fab Freshmen. Kentucky took control with an early 16-0 run and led by 20 at halftime.

They might as well have cut down the nets right then.

Calipari, in his third season at Kentucky, just keeps recruiting the best high school players in the land, molds them into a top team, then sends most of 'em on to the NBA before they've barely had time to find their way to class.

Then he starts the whole process over again.

But for all the talk about Calipari's one-and-done tactics, he's getting plenty of contributions from those who hung around beyond their freshmen year.

EDDIE PELLIS

PHOENIX | Rick Pitino nearly came unhinged and his point guard watched the end of the game from the bench.

When it was over, though, it was Pitino and Louisville making plans for the Final Four and his protegee, Billy Donovan, and the Florida Gators wondering what the heck happened.

Freshman forward Chane Behanan made the go-ahead basket with 1:06 left Saturday and the fourth-seeded Cardinals finished the game on a 23-8 run for a 72-68 victory over Donovan's stunned Florida team in the West Regional final.

Russ Smith, who finished with 19 points, followed Behanan's bucket with a pair of free throws and then Florida freshman Bradley Beal and teammate Kenny Boynton each missed chances to tie.

Louisville made one more free throw to seal the game and reach its ninth Final Four, the second under Pitino, despite playing the final 3:58 without point guard Peyton Siva, who fouled out.

"They outplayed us, but the last 8 minutes won the game," Pitino said.

BOSTON | Ohio State coach Thad Matta sized up his team in the middle of the season and had it figured for an early loss when the NCAA tournament came around.

The final weekend of March Madness is next, and the Buckeyes will be there.

Jared Sullinger recovered from first-half foul trouble to score 19 points and grab seven rebounds, helping Ohio State beat top-seeded Syracuse 77-70 on Saturday to advance to the Final Four in New Orleans.

"We're not going down to New Orleans for a vacation. It's a business trip," said Sullinger, who picked up his second foul 6 minutes into the game and did not return the rest of the half. "These guys have played without me before, so they know what they have to do."

Deshaun Thomas scored 14 with nine rebounds for Ohio State (31-7), which led by eight points with 59 seconds to play and held on after the Orange cut it to three. The Buckeyes made 13 of 14 free throws in the final 68 seconds and 31 of 42 from the line in all.

Ohio State is making its first trip to the Final Four since 2007, when it lost in the national championship game to Florida.

JAYHAWKS DROP TAR HEELS 80-67 FOR FINAL FOUR BERTH

ST. LOUIS | Kansas is back to the Final Four with an 80-67 victory over former coach Roy Williams and top-seeded North Carolina on Sunday.

The second-seeded Jayhawks (31-6) will play Ohio State on Saturday in their first Final Four appearance since winning the 2008 national championship.

Tyshawn Taylor scored 22 points, leading five Jayhawks in double figures. Player of the year candidate Thomas Robinson added 18 points and nine rebounds, and Elijah Johnson kept up his blistering pace in the NCAA tournament with 10 points, including a 3-pointer with 3:07 to play that sparked Kansas' 12-0 run to end the game.

James Michael McAdoo scored 15 for the Tar Heels (32-6), who played better in their second game without injured point guard Kendall Marshall. But North Carolina couldn't overcome a 5:46 field goal drought to end the Midwest Regional final. — AP

WOODS A WINNER ON TOUR AGAIN AFTER 30 MONTHS

ORLANDO, Fla. | Tiger Woods finally brought the buzz back to the very thing that made him famous — winning.

Two weeks after another injury scare, Woods looked dominant as ever in that red shirt on Sunday to win the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

Woods closed with a 2-under 70 for a five-shot win over Graeme McDowell.

The final hole was a mere formality, and Woods tapped his putter on the ground waiting for his turn, knowing that after 30 months without a win on the PGA Tour was about to win.

He walked off the green with his arm extended, waving his cap to a raucous gallery.

Woods finished at 13-under 275 for his 72nd PGA Tour win, one short of Jack Nicklaus for second place on the career list. — AP

REDS CLOSER MADSON WILL MISS SEASON

GOODYEAR, Ariz. | Cincinnati Reds closer Ryan Madson has a torn ligament in his pitching elbow and will miss the season.

Madson returned to Cincinnati and was examined by team medical director Dr. Timothy Kremchek. The Reds said Saturday that Kremchek told general manager Walt Jocketty the ligament was torn from the bone of Madson's right elbow.

Madson agreed in January to a one-year contract guaranteeing $8.5 million, after a $44 million, four-year deal to stay with Philadelphia collapsed in November.

"We talked to the team," Jocketty said. "We all have to stay positive. We have alternatives internally that we will sort through in the next few days." — AP

CUETO ALLOWS THREE HOMERS TO ROCKIES, REDS LOSE 7-3

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. | Todd Helton hit his first two home runs of spring training and Casey Blake hit his first, all drives off Johnny Cueto that led the Colorado Rockies over the Cincinnati Reds 7-3.

Helton, entered with a .375 average (9 for 24) and five doubles, hit solo drives to right in the second and to left in the fourth.

Blake's two-run homer in the fifth was his first extra-base hit of spring training.

Brandon Roberts added a two-run double for Colorado. Starter Jhoulys Chacin allowed two runs and six hits in five innings.

Joey Votto, in a 5-for-31 slide coming in, had an RBI single in the third and added a single in the fifth.

Cueto gave up five runs and six hits in six innings. — AP

Our area has the best college hoops there is

Is there any doubt anymore we live in the greatest region for college basketball there is right now?

Kentucky and Louisville make up 50 percent of the Final Four, with one more New Orleans-bound team just a short trip up I-71 (or U.S. 62, if you're adventurous) in Ohio State.

Not to mention three more Sweet 16 teams in Cincinnati, Xavier and Ohio that each played their best ball at the right time in solid tournament runs. And Murray State, which had a season to be proud of and may again next year with Steve Prohm and Isaiah Canaan sticking around, and Western Kentucky, which fought its way through adversity into the NCAA tournament.

Not only can residents of this area be proud of having three semi-local teams in the Final Four, but they can be proud of how they got there.

Kentucky, a tried and tested No. 1 which has demolished most everyone it's faced all season, fell flat in the SEC tournament final against Vanderbilt but has looked just fine since. Indiana pushed the Wildcats more than most anticipated, but Kentucky

Take Jones, a sophomore forward who passed up the draft. He scored just one point in the opening half, but his fingerprints were all over Kentucky's dominating performance: nine rebounds, six assists, three blocks and two steals — most in the first 10 minutes.

Then there's Darius Miller, one of only two seniors on the roster. He added four points, two assists and two steals to the first-half blowout.

At one point, Kidd-Gilchrist had as many points as Baylor's entire team: 17 apiece. Kentucky led 42-22 at the break and Baylor never got any closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

Quincy Acy led Baylor with 22 points.

With Jones in the clear and going in for a fastbreak layup, the 235-pound Acy came up from behind, took a whack at the ball but mainly just crashed into the Kentucky player, sending him flying into the Baylor cheerleaders along the baseline. Jones was OK, and the officials doled out a flagrant foul on Acy after looking at the replay.

Jones made one of the free throws, Kentucky missed a jumper and the Bears, seemingly inspired by Acy's bravado, ripped off an 8-0 run that led Calipari to call a quick timeout. He already had yanked Doron Lamb from the game for trying to make the highlight reels rather than taking a layup. The sophomore guard passed up a clear path to the basket, instead opting for a lob pass to the trailing Davis.

The big man missed the dunk, hanging on the rim as Baylor grabbed the rebound and took off the other way for a basket.

After Quincy Miller hit an uncontested 3-pointer from the top of the lane to give Baylor a 10-5 lead, Calipari lashed into his team — and, boy, did they respond.

Sixteen consecutive points, an NBA-like display of defensive dominance and easy baskets that sent the Georgia Dome, and the predominantly blue-clad crowd, into a frenzy.

Jones displayed his all-around game, coming up with three steals and swatting away a shot by 5-foot-10 Pierre Jackson like this was a game between men and boys. Kentucky fed off his defense, running the court at every opportunity for layup after layup. Kidd-Gilchrist had three of them, along with a slam by Davis that made up for the one he missed.

Miller hit a jumper and Kyle Wiltjer knocked down a 3-pointer, pumping his fist and smiling as he trotted back down the court.

There were plenty of smiles from the folks in blue, though Kentucky did get a scare early in the second half when Davis went down with an injured left knee.

The 6-foot-10 freshman was driving to the basket when he banged knees with Baylor's Perry Jones III, going down hard along the baseline. A hush fell over the massive stadium as Davis, writhing in pain, grabbed at his knee. Finally, he limped to the bench, but it was clear the injury wasn't too serious when the trainers kept flexing the leg, then rubbed it with an ointment to ease the pain.

After just a few minutes, Davis got up and headed to the scorer's table, checking back into the game.

The Kentucky fans broke into a huge cheer of relief.

There's still work to do in the Big Easy.

“This team is playing for you and playing for each other. Let's see if we can keep this thing rolling a bit.”

handled that challenge and came back two days later to again outlast a very good Baylor team. (I can't resist pointing out the Bears play a lot better than they look in those Day-Glo and black-with-camouflage-stripes getups.)

BUCKEYES

FROM A6

They had lost in the regional semifinals in each of the past two seasons, and Matta wasn't even sure they would make it that far after a series of unimpressive practices.

When the Buckeyes, who spent five weeks as the No. 2 team in the nation, closed out February with three defeats in five games — including a home loss to Wisconsin on Feb. 26 — Matta had more reason to worry.

But he got the response he was hoping for.

"That loss opened their eyes and said, 'Hey, maybe we're not as good as we think we are,'" Matta said. "Maybe it got us pointed in the right direction."

Brandon Triche scored 15 points and Baye Keita had 10 rebounds for Syracuse (34-3). The Orange were hoping for a return trip to New Orleans, where they won their only national championship in 2003.

In a tightly officiated game that left Sullinger on the bench in foul trouble for most of the first half and Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim not-quite muzzled after picking up a technical foul, it came down to free throws. Syracuse was called for 29 fouls — its most in more than three years — despite playing its usual 2-3 zone.

Boeheim didn't like several of them.

He picked up a technical for objecting to a foul in the first half, and he escaped another in the second half despite shouting his profane complaint across the court. At one point, he turned to Jeff Hathaway, the chairman of the NCAA selection committee who was sitting near the Syracuse bench, and made his case in person.

Afterward, Boeheim gave a terse "No comment" when asked if the officials hurt the flow of the game. A statement from the officiating crew chief said Boeheim was given a technical for being out of the coaching box and gesturing about a call.

"We're not going to blame it on the refs," said guard Scoop Jardine, who had 14 points and six assists. "I think we had a chance to win the game no matter what, with the refs or without them giving us any calls."

The Orange went to the line 25 times, making 20 foul shots.

The frequent whistles left both teams struggling to get into a groove in the first half — there were only four baskets in the last 9:30. That seemed to be good news for Ohio State, which managed to stay with the No. 1 seed despite getting only 6 minutes from Sullinger, the star of the Buckeyes' East Regional semifinal win over Cincinnati.

"We got Sullinger in foul trouble early and we didn't take advantage of it," Boeheim said. "You know when he comes back in he's going to be difficult, and he was."

Ohio State opened a 46-36 lead with under 14 minutes to play. Syracuse scored eight of the next nine points to make it a one-point game, but the Orange could never get back in the lead.

They trailed by eight with 59 seconds left and cut it to three, but they needed the Buckeyes to miss free throws, and that didn't happen.

LEWIS COUNTY 9, BUCKHORN 0

Lions coast past Wildcats at Whitaker Bank

ZACK KLEMMER
zack.klemme@lee.net

LEXINGTON | Lewis County's goal in 2012, as stated by first-year coach Keith Prater, is to begin the season at Whitaker Bank Park in Lexington and end it there, too.

The way the Lions have been playing early in the season, fulfilling the second part of that credo — which would require winning the 16th Region and finishing the season at the state tournament — is a lofty but not unattainable aim.

Lewis took advantage of an early-season chance to play in the Lexington Legends' ballpark and disposed of Buckhorn 9-0 on Saturday night.

Lions pitchers Sammy Holder, Jordan Davis and Brett Wampler combined to throw four perfect innings to shut down the Wildcats until John Stidham's double leading off the fifth. Kyle Ruggles drove in two first-inning runs, Connor Owens went 2-for-2 and Holder was 2-for-3.

The Lions probably could have run-ruled Buckhorn had they so chosen, grabbing a big early lead, but instead substituted liberally and got every player into the game.

"We wanted to have fun tonight. We weren't here to do anything but have fun and enjoy the experience," Prater said. "Our top guys, we played them about the first three innings or so, we were up 5-0 there, and that's where we wanted to be, so we're pleased with that."

Ruggles provided the initial blow for Lewis in the first inning, driving in Holder, who had singled, and Corey Davis, who had walked, with a two-out bloop to shallow right-center. One inning later, Holder reached base on a two-out three-base error and scored on another error when Kasey Riley put the ball in play.

And in the third, Jordan Davis' double plated Cory Christy and Holder dropped a perfect squeeze bunt with two outs to score Davis from third for that five-run edge.

Owens tripled to score

Nick Thompson and then scored himself on a Buckhorn throwing error. Christy followed with another triple and came home on a wild pitch to extend the Lions' lead to 8-0.

Prater had said he wanted to get everyone on the field, and he did so in the ensuing stages, noting, "Everybody got a chance to experience this."

Jordan Doyle got on base the hard way in the fifth inning, taking a pitch in the helmet, but stayed in the game and scored on Austin Rucker's single to left for the final margin.

The Lions' defeat of the Wildcats wasn't nearly as dramatic as their 5-4 extra-inning walk-off victory over Ashland Blazer in their home opener on Thursday or their 5-3 loss at Boyd County on Friday night.

Those games, though, have shown the Lions can compete with the top echelon in the region. The Tomcats and the red-clad Lions faced off in the region tournament championship game last season in Vanceburg, with Boyd claiming the 16th Region's berth in Lexington.

Now Lewis is looking for a chance to do the same thing.

"We felt coming in we had a pretty good team, and we came in and got Ashland in the home opener and went to Boyd with multiple opportunities to win," Prater said. "We had (the) bases loaded a couple times and didn't get anything going, (and) we got first- and-third there in the seventh and didn't get anything going.

"We're competing against the best teams in the region, and we feel realistically we got a chance (to win the region)."

Lewis hosts Bracken County this evening.

KENTUCKY 79, GONZAGA 62

Wildcats knock off Zags to reach Elite Eight

JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press

KINGSTON, R.I. | Kentucky didn't need its "40 minutes of dread" full-court press to beat Gonzaga.

It just needed a quick strike from long range.

Keyla Snowden made five 3-pointers, hitting a pair of them to turn back the Bulldogs' last charge on Sunday as Kentucky beat Gonzaga 79-62 to advance to the East Regional finals of the NCAA women's tournament.

Snowden had 17 points, going 5 of 9 from 3-point range, and Samarie Walker scored 16 with 12 rebounds for No. 2 seed Kentucky, which plays top-seeded Connecticut on Tuesday for a spot in the Final Four in Denver. UConn beat Penn State 77-59 earlier in the day.

It's the second trip to the regional finals for Kentucky (28-6) in three years.

Kayla Standish scored 25 for No. 11 seed Gonzaga (28-6), which reached the round of 16 for the third consecutive year.

Kentucky, which blew a 17-point lead in the second round against Wisconsin-Green Bay before holding on to win, led by 21 in the second half on Sunday before the Zags cut it to 59-51. Three times Gonzaga had the ball with a chance to further trim the deficit, but it couldn't do so.

The Wildcats finally pulled away on their fourth trip down, when Snowden hit a 3 to make it an 11-point game. It was 64-53 when Snowden hit another 3, and Gonzaga never threatened again.

What had been a decent crowd for the early game between local favorite Connecticut and Penn State dwindled to just a few hundred when Kentucky took a 43-28 lead into the half. And just a few hundred fans remained when the Wildcats band played "My Old Kentucky Home" after the final buzzer.

Kentucky led the entire game, opening a 15-point lead at halftime and turning it into a 21-point advantage with 14 minutes left.

A'dia Mathies, the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year, went 3 for 4 from 3-point range and added seven assists. Kastine Evans grabbed 10 rebounds for the Wildcats and Bria Goss had 10 points.

Kelly Bowen scored 11 with nine rebounds and Katelan Redmon had 10 and seven for Gonzaga, which beat Rutgers and Miami to reach the regional semis.

The Zags' trip to Rhode Island won't go to waste: The players — none of whom had ever been to the state — said they planned to dip their toes in the Atlantic Ocean before heading home.

Kentucky beat McNeese State by six in the first round and squeaked by Green Bay in the second. But the Wildcats didn't need their vaunted full-court pressure to move just one game from joining the Kentucky men in the NCAA Final Four.

CARDS

FROM A6

Seventh-seeded Florida (26-11) went out in the regional final for the second straight year, with Donovan falling to 0-7 lifetime against the man who coached him at Providence, hired him as an assistant at Kentucky and felt as proud as a papa when he watched Donovan win his two national titles in 2006 and 2007.

This one, however, was no heartwarmer.

Donovan got under Pitino's skin early in the second half during a timeout when he worked over the officials, who promptly called a foul against the Cardinals (30-9) when play resumed.

"He called that," Pitino shouted. "Why don't you just give him a whistle?"

Pitino couldn't get a break for a while after that and when Siva picked up his fourth foul, the coach stomped onto the court and got hit with a technical. Erving Walker made four straight free throws and the Gators led by 11, setting the stage for what could've been Donovan's fourth trip to the Final Four.

But the team that went 8 for 11 from 3-point range in the first half went cold — really cold — not hitting any of nine attempts from beyond the arc in the second.

The Gators missed seven shots and committed one turnover over the last 2:30. They didn't score after Boynton's layup gave them a 68-66 lead with 2:39 left.

The game's best freshman? That was Behanan, who was far less heralded than Beal coming out of high school, but outplayed him down the stretch when the trip to New Orleans was on the line.

The freshman from Cincinnati scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half, including nine over the last 8:02 and Louisville's last two field goals — both after Siva had fouled out with nine points and eight assists.

Beal, meanwhile, finished with 14 points and controlled this game for the first 37 minutes.

But over the last 3, he tried twice to take the ball to the hoop, only to get denied by 6-foot-10 center Gorgui Dieng. Beal missed a desperation 3 in the waning seconds and also got called for traveling after stealing a wild pass from Smith while Louisville was nursing a one-point lead with 18 seconds left.

Next up for Pitino is a trip to New Orleans for his sixth Final Four. And waiting next Saturday is his old school, Kentucky.

In the first half, Donovan looked like the better coach, though anyone would look good when his team is shooting that way. The Gators went 8 for 11 from 3, 6 for 10 from inside the arc and constantly harassed Louisville en route to a 41-33 lead.

But Pitino didn't become the first coach to take three programs to the Final Four for nothing. He scrapped the zone defense, had his players get up in the face of Florida's players and it worked, though the Cardinals paid the price in foul trouble.

Fleming bowling teams post solid first KHSAA season

LADY PANTHERS FINISH 20-1, BOYS GO 20-5

ZACK KLEMMER
zack.klemme@lee.net

This may have been the first school year the KHSAA sponsored bowling, but Fleming County has been at it for a while now, and the Panthers used that experience to post a solid showing in the first KHSAA state tournament in Louisville last week.

Fleming's girls, the inaugural Eighth Region champions, won their first 20 matches and rolled the third-best qualifying round in the state tournament. They reached the round of eight before falling to Bryan Station, a team they had beaten in the regular season, to finish 20-1.

The boys finished 20-5, finishing second in the region to Montgomery County before rolling the ninth-best qualifying match at state, losing to Cooper in the first round. The Panthers finished 20-5 in their first season of KHSAA competition.

A few Panthers also placed very well at state as individuals. Taryn Wallingford, Jasmine Barbee and Sarah Flora finished first, second and third, respectively, in the region tournament and came in 13th, 15th and 29th in the state.

On the boys' side, Nathan Doyle was second in the region and David Whitson placed fourth. Doyle came in seventh in Louisville, while Whitson rolled 30th.

Fleming coach Gary Shannon saw his girls' team built on the foundation of the experience of club bowling in previous seasons.

"We didn't lose much last year and our girls' team was very, very strong," he said. "Matter of fact, they were undefeated this year, they were 19-0 going into the state tournament. I returned four seniors — Taryn Wallingford, Jasmine Barbee, Brandi Purcell and Sara Flora. I have two juniors, Sarah Wagoner and Jerrica Shannon, back from last year's team, and they all rolled strong all year long."

The boys' team lost seven seniors from last season, but returned five and still had plenty enough to be competitive.

Shannon pointed to Whitson, Doyle, Josh Dyer and Donovan Spann as the Panthers' leaders this year.

Of the 12 teams in the new Eighth Region, which Shannon described as "anywhere from our county south and east down to Lee County all the way into Corbin and as far west as Richmond," the coach estimated Fleming is one of five that participated in bowling last year.

"So there were seven new ones, and a lot of the competition we faced was competition we had faced for the last three or four years when it was just a bowling club," Shannon said.

A benefit to KHSAA recognition, Shannon said, was increased visibility to colleges. Barbee was offered a full scholarship to Union College, the coach said, during the state tournament. Shannon said Barbee isn't sure yet if she'll accept.

Looking ahead to next year, Fleming looks to sustain the success it had this season.

"I feel like my boys team will have an awful good chance to finish high in the state of Kentucky next year because I didn't lose but two seniors, and the two juniors both made the singles competition in the state," Shannon said. "My girls will (have) a rebuilding year next year. I'm gonna lose four seniors and they were the tops in my program. Of course, I've got two juniors coming back that are gonna be really tough."

Stewart wins rain-shortened Sprint Cup race in Fontana

SEVENTH WIN IN LAST 15 RACES

GREG BEACHAM
Associated Press

FONTANA, Calif. | Tony Stewart got his second NASCAR victory of the season Sunday when rain shortened the race at Auto Club Speedway by 71 laps.

The defending Sprint Cup champion has won seven of the last 15 races in a remarkable stretch of dominance, including Las Vegas last month.

Stewart's Chevrolet passed Kyle Busch 44 laps before the race was stopped when the looming rain clouds finally halted a race run entirely on green flags to that point. The race was called off after a short delay, giving Stewart his 46th career win and his second at Fontana.

Busch finished second, and Dale Earnhardt Jr. added to his strong start to the season in third.

"We had a great race car there from the start of the race," said Busch, who started second alongside teammate Denny Hamlin and took the lead on the second lap. "We led a lot of laps. I just wish we led 30 more."

Defending race winner Kevin Harvick was fourth, and Carl Edwards was fifth. Greg Biffle, Edwards' Roush Fenway Racing teammate, finished sixth and kept a seven-point lead on Harvick atop the points standings.

With menacing clouds obscuring Mount Baldy to the north and threatening rain, the drivers realized they might not be able to get much past the halfway point necessary to make a race official. They mounted a fast, clean race that nearly set the track record for consecutive green-flag laps until the rain finally hit, eventually forcing a caution on the 125th lap.

"We all knew it was just going to be a matter of time," Busch said. "So probably at Lap 60 or 70, we were thinking, 'OK, we're probably going to race to Lap 100.'"

The rain erased a potential disappointment for five-time Fontana champion Jimmie Johnson, who was 10th when the caution came out. He elected to pit, getting four tires and fuel — but moments later, his car started spitting smoke.

With no idea what was wrong with the car, crew chief Chad Knaus told Johnson to stay on the course to keep his position if the race was red-flagged. The strategy worked, and the five-time Sprint Cup champions extended their streak to 10 straight top-10 finishes on this track.

After hitting the wall late in last week's race at Bristol, Stewart was back in top form. He won at Las Vegas with an aggressive move out of a restart, but the real racing at Fontana hadn't even started before rain hit.

"We didn't have an opportunity to do anything other than what we had planned from the start," said Earnhardt, who has finished in the top 15 in all five races this season. "I like how our season is going so far. If we keep going like this, maybe we can get some opportunities ... and seal the deal."

A weekend of perfect weather led to clear blue skies early Sunday morning, but the expected cloud cover rolled in within minutes of the start. The resulting drop in temperature threw off many teams' calculations on air pressure and other decisions, forcing adjustments on their first pit stops.

The 2-mile Auto Club Speedway track is known for its bumpy, wide asphalt that puts a premium on driver skill and strategy, but also is more susceptible to temperature problems.

HAWKS BEAT JAZZ IN NBA'S FIRST 4OT GAME SINCE 1997

ATLANTA | Joe Johnson scored 37 points, Josh Smith added 22 and the Atlanta Hawks ended Utah's six-game winning streak with a 139-133 victory Sunday night in the NBA's first quadruple-overtime game since 1997.

The four overtimes tied for the third-longest in NBA history. It was the ninth NBA game to go four OTs and the first since Phoenix beat Portland 140-139 on Nov. 14, 1997.

Al Jefferson finished with 28 points and 17 rebounds, and Paul Millsap had 25 points and 13 boards for the Jazz before both players fouled out in the final overtime.

Atlanta has won four straight and six of seven. The Hawks improved to 30-20 and moved one-half game ahead of Indiana for fifth place in the Eastern Conference. — AP

MATH SIMPLE FOR U.S.: BEAT EL SALVADOR TO ADVANCE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. | Joe Corona has no mixed emotions and only one thought as the Californian prepares to play El Salvador, his mother's home country.

The midfielder doesn't want to get emotional with the game and is thinking only of trying to get three points on Monday night.

The United States needs more than a good game from the Under-23 team Monday night. The Americans must win against El Salvador or miss on qualifying for the Olympics for only the second time since 1974 and first time since 2004.

Canada and El Salvador are tied atop Group A with four points, and Canada plays Cuba, which has given up 10 goals in two games. The top two teams advance to Saturday's semifinals in Kansas City, Kan., where the winners qualify for London. — AP

Obama squeezes N. Korea to change, China to help

BEN FELLER
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea | Trying to muscle North Korea toward peace over provocation, President Barack Obama is broadening his squeeze play from the heart of this tensely divided peninsula, pressuring China to show more influence and warning North Korea that it is headed toward a crippling “dead end” of isolation.

From this capital teeming with pride, Obama sought for a second day Monday to contrast the success of the South to the impoverished North, whose nuclear and missile tests have kept its neighbor on edge and itself on the wrong side of the world community. Already, he said, looking into the North from near the border was like witnessing a “time warp” of despair.

In a speech at Hankuk University, one of Seoul’s top-ranked schools, Obama will campaign against the spread of nuclear material and weaponry with North Korea’s shadow figuring large. The North plans to launch a satellite with a long-range rocket next month against fierce objections from world powers, as the same technology could be used to fire a missile.

Obama will also try to build diplomatic force by turning to China, North Korea’s main ally, when he meets with Chinese President Hu Jintao. That conversation is among a flurry of engagements for Obama, including a final meeting with departing Russian President Dmitry Medvedev, on the sidelines of a major Nuclear Security Summit.

In a news conference here Sunday, Obama challenged North Korea’s pride and its plans, questioning whether its new, young leader, Kim Jong Un, was even truly in charge. Obama’s trip comes as North Koreans mark the end of the 100-day mourning period for longtime leader Kim Jong Il, who died of a heart attack in December.

“It’s not clear exactly who’s calling the shots and what their long-term objectives are,” Obama said. “But regardless of the North Korean leadership, what is clear is that they have not yet made that strategic pivot where they say to themselves, ‘What we’re doing isn’t working. It’s leading our country and our people down a dead end.’”

Obama then set some blunt expectations for China, questioning how much it was helping to ease tensions with North Korea by turning a “blind eye to deliberate provocations.”

“That’s obviously not working,” Obama said. He said he did not doubt China shares the goal of a nuclear-weapons-free North Korea, but that it had to act on that.

The president’s three-day trip here amounts to a reminder of the international struggles in his lap in the midst of a re-election year driven more by economic woes. He came to solidify pressure on North Korea, seek help with crises in Syria and Iran and advance a global effort he spearheaded to keep nuclear material from getting into terrorists’ hands.

Obama wore a tired look after a 17-hour flight from Washington, a helicopter ride to the border zone, two sets of diplomatic talks, the news conference and an official dinner. But he succeeded in showing solidarity with his diplomatic friend, South Korean President Lee Myung-bak, and in cementing a lasting presidential image from inside no-man’s land.

The Demilitarized Zone is a Cold War anachronism, a legacy of the uncertain armistice that ended the Korean War nearly 60 years ago.

Hundreds of thousands of troops stand ready on both sides of the border zone, which is littered with land mines and encased in razor wire.

From a lookout point with binoculars in hand, Obama peered North, then South, within a football-field’s length of the demarcation line.

He also shook hands and spoke briefly in the dining hall at a U.S. military camp just outside the 2.5-mile-zone, saying the troops were working at “freedom’s frontier.”

The United States has about 28,500 troops in South Korea, a deterrent force and a symbol of the military might Obama wants to keep in Asia.

The planned rocket launch by North Korea is yet another setback for the U.S. in years of on-again, off-again attempts to launch real negotiations.

North Korea walked away from international disarmament talks in 2009. Years of fitful negotiations had succeeded in ending part of North Korea’s nuclear program but failed in stopping it from building and testing nuclear devices and long-range missiles that might be able to carry bombs.

Obama said the launch would jeopardize a new deal for the U.S. to resume food aid to North Korea, and the world community would likely respond with another round of sanctions.

The big consequence for North Korea, he said, would be one big blown opportunity.

“If a country can’t feed its people effectively, if it can’t make anything of any use to anybody, if it has no exports other than weapons, and even those aren’t ones that in any way would be considered state-of-the-art ... then you’d think you’d want to try something different.”

For his part, Lee said: “There is no difference of opinion between the U.S. and South Korea. We’ll remain very calm and rational and we will be wise in dealing with the North Koreans if in fact they do go ahead with their announcement.”

Obama has called nuclear terrorism the gravest threat the United States and the world may face. North Korea is a prime suspect in the proliferation of some nuclear know-how, along with missiles that could be used to deliver weapons of mass destruction.

Key question in Penn State case: Who is Victim 2?

MARK SCOLFORO
Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. | The case is highly emotional, with accusations delving deep back in time and numerous alleged victims. But for all its breadth, one chapter in the Penn State abuse saga outpaces the others: the alleged sexual assault in a team shower by former assistant coach Jerry Sandusky of a boy known only as Victim 2.

It’s the allegation that

Penn State acknowledges ended Joe Paterno’s distinguished football coaching career and spawned criminal charges against two school officials.

But the only person who says he saw it happen is another assistant. Prosecutors don’t know who the boy is, while Sandusky says he believes he does know, and that the now-grown man, referred to in court papers only as Victim 2, could exonerate him.

Even the timing of the allegation is in question, as is the age of the boy a decade ago.

All the conflicting information presents tough challenges for prosecutors — not just at the sex abuse trial beginning in mid-May, at which the defense does not plan to call the man, but also in the court of public opinion.

“I’m not trying to make light of the situation, but how can you say it’s murder if there’s no body?” said 1982 Penn State alumna Wendy Silverwood, a saleswoman from West Chester, Pa., who said she believes Paterno was not given a fair shake. “If you don’t know who the victim is, and you can’t identify and speak with them, how can you bring charges?”

As recently as Thursday, Sandusky’s lawyer argued in court filings that there wasn’t enough evidence to support the charges relating to Victim 2. Sandusky, 68, faces 52 criminal counts involving 10 boys dating to the late 1990s and denies all the allegations.

The lawyer, Joe Amendola, told The Associated Press that a young man contacted him after Sandusky’s November arrest to say he believed he might be the person referred to as Victim 2. After meeting with him, along with his mother and adult brother, Amendola was left with doubts.

“I wasn’t sure he was,” Amendola said. “I’m still not sure. I haven’t been able to verify it. Jerry’s very sure.”

Amendola said that the young man told him Sandusky had not abused him, but that he later obtained a lawyer and cut off contact. Amendola does not plan to subpoena the young man and declined to identify him or his lawyer.

“I don’t want to put someone on the stand who might say something completely different,” Amendola said. “And quite honestly, now that he’s got a lawyer, he might say something different.”

Records supplied by prosecutors indicate some purported victims have changed their stories, the lawyer said.

“Several of the kids, who are so-called victims now, initially said nothing happened,” Amendola said. “And now they’re victims.”

Mike McQueary, who in 2002 was a graduate assistant for the football team, testified at the December preliminary hearing that he saw Sandusky and the boy, both naked, after hearing skin-on-skin slapping sounds. He called it “extremely sexual” and “some kind of intercourse.”

McQueary said he reported what he saw in the locker room shower to Paterno and Penn State administrators Tim Curley and Gary Schultz.

Afghans: U.S. paid $50K per shooting spree death

HEIDI VOGT AND MIRWAIS KHAN
Associated Press

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan | The U.S. paid $50,000 in compensation for each villager killed and $11,000 for each person wounded in a shooting rampage allegedly carried out by a rogue American soldier in southern Afghanistan, Afghan officials said Sunday.

The families were told that the money came from President Barack Obama. The unusually large payouts were the latest move by the White House to mend relations with the Afghan people after the killings threatened to shatter already tense relations.

Army Staff Sgt. Robert Bales is accused of sneaking off his base on March 11, then creeping into houses in two nearby villages and opening fire on families as they slept.

The killings came as tensions between the U.S. and Afghanistan were strained following the burning of Qurans at a U.S. base in February. That act — which U.S. officials have acknowledged was a mistake — sparked riots and attacks that killed more than 30 people, including six American soldiers.

There have been no violent protests following the March 11 shootings in Kandahar province's Panjwai district, but demands for justice on Afghan terms have been getting louder since Bales was flown out of the country to a U.S. military prison. Many Afghans in Kandahar have continued to argue that there must have been multiple gunmen and accused the U.S. government of using Bales as a scapegoat.

U.S. investigators believe the gunman returned to his base after the first attack and later slipped away to kill again.

That would seem to support the U.S. government's assertion that the shooter acted alone, since the killings would have been perpetrated over a longer period of time than assumed when Bales was detained outside his base in Kandahar province's Panjwai district.

But it also raises new questions about how the suspect could have carried out the pre-dawn attacks without drawing attention from any Americans on the base.

Bales has been charged with 17 counts of premeditated murder and other crimes and could face the death penalty if convicted.

The families of the dead received the money Saturday at the governor's office, said Kandahar provincial council member Agha Lalai. He and community elder Jan Agha confirmed the payout amounts.

Survivors previously had received smaller compensation payments from Afghan officials — $2,000 for each death and $1,000 for each person wounded.

Two U.S. officials confirmed that compensation had been paid but declined to discuss exact amounts, saying only that the payments reflected the devastating nature of the incident. The officials spoke anonymously because of the sensitivity of the subject.

A spokesman for NATO and U.S. forces, Lt. Col. Jimmie Cummings, said only that coalition members often make compensation payments, but they are usually kept private.

"As the settlement of claims is in most cases a sensitive topic for those who have suffered loss, it is usually a matter of agreement that the terms of the settlement remain confidential," Cummings said.

However, civilian death compensations are occasionally made public. In

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Afghan villagers pray over the grave of one of the 16 victims killed in a shooting rampage in the Panjwai district of Kandahar province south of Kabul, Afghanistan, Saturday. Mohammad Wazir has trouble even drinking water now, because it reminds him of the last time he saw his 7-year-old daughter. He had asked his wife for a drink but his daughter insisted on fetching it. Now his daughter Masooma is dead, killed along with 10 other members of his family in a shooting rampage attributed to a U.S. soldier. The soldier faces the death penalty but Wazir and his neighbors say they feel irreparably broken.

2010, U.S. troops in Helmand province said they paid $1,500 to $2,000 if a civilian was killed in a military operation and $600 to $1,500 for a serious injury. The Panjwai shootings are different because they were not part of a sanctioned operation, but it is a distinction lost on many Afghans who see any civilian deaths as criminal.

The provided compensation figures would mean that at least $866,000 was paid out in all. Afghan officials and villagers have counted 16 dead — 12 in the village of Balandi and four in neighboring Alkozai — and six wounded. The U.S. military has charged Bales with 17 murders without explaining the discrepancy.

The 38-year-old soldier, who is from Lake Tapps, Wash., is accused of using his 9mm pistol and M-4 rifle to kill four men, four women, two boys and seven girls, then burning some of the bodies. The ages of the children were not disclosed in the charge sheet.

Bales is being held in a military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. The mandatory minimum sentence if he is convicted is life imprisonment with the chance of parole. He could also receive the death penalty.

Families of the dead declined to comment on any payments by U.S. officials on Sunday, but some said previously that they were more concerned about seeing the perpetrator punished than money.

MANGO: A FRUIT AND A COMFORT FOOD

YOU WILL CRAVE THE
FEELING OF CONTENTMENT

Jane Kline Kabler

Mangos are considered a comfort food, and can really make you feel better. Many people just walk by the counter in the market where these beautiful fruits, the mangos, are placed and little do they know these are so good for you and delicious.

Mangos are rich in vitamins, and antioxidants. They contain an enzyme which is soothing to the stomach and are similar to papayas with about the same nutrients. Personally I think they are much better. Papayas are bit too sweet for me. The enzymes act as a digestive aid and gives you the feeling of contentment. After once eating mangos you will crave them, trust me!

Mangos are used in fruit salads, marinades, and eaten just plain. They prevent and protect against some degenerative diseases, especially the heart and may help prevent certain types of cancer, and lowers blood cholesterol. A mango of averaged size contains up to 40 percent of your daily fiber requirement. They are also good for those who run or exercise, since they replace lost potassium. ]

Fact: Mangos are a good source of Vitamins A and C and a great source of potassium and beta carotene; they are low in calorie, fat and sodium; they are a good fruit to eat daily; they have about 66 calories in each mango; and 17 grams of carbohydrates.

The mango originated from Southeast Asia where it has grown for over 4,000 years. Now the mango groves have spread to other tropical parts of the world. Many mango trees will grow to 60 feet tall and are considered evergreens. It takes 4-6 years to bear its first fruit.

The trees like hot, dry periods to produce a good crop. Most of the mangos sold in the United States come from Mexico, Haiti, and South America. There are over 1,000 varieties of mangos throughout the world.

To know if a mango is ripe, smell the end where the stem was hooked on before picking. You should smell a sweet fruity aroma. Also lightly squeeze the fruit and it should be slightly soft and the skin yellow and red. There shouldn't be much green on the skin when ripe. Mangos keep well in the refrigerator and will last about two weeks. If you need to speed up the riping process, place it in a brown bag on the kitchen counter overnight. You can also place an apple in the bag to speed up the process.

Tips for peeling and getting out the fruit. First I wash the mango and pat dry; then go close to the middle of the top and slice down the wide flat side, and run the knife along the seed; do the other side; then cut the thin strip down the thin sides. take the two big pieces and score the fruit but don't cut through the peeling and flip it wrong side out; take a paring knife and run under each square. On the two narrow sides I just peel them and cut in small chunks. There won't be much to eat off of that part. The seed in side is about three inches long and 2 1/2 inches wide. Discard the seed. Keep cut mango pieces refrigerated.

COUPON QUEEN

Double, Double Coupon Trouble

In last week's column, I answered questions about Catalina coupons. This week, I'll let's look at some of the most frequently asked couponing questions from beginners. These readers want to know more about double coupon policies.

JILL CATALDO

DEAR JILL: Why do some stores double coupons and others don't? It drives me crazy that my sister can get double the value of her coupons at the stores near her, but the ones near me never offer a similar deal. How can I get my store to double my coupons? — Emily R.

DEAR EMILY: Coupon doubling is when a store offers to double the value of a coupon at checkout. For example, a doubled 50-cent coupon for pasta sauce takes $1 off the price. Markets that offer double coupon promotions are a hot spot for coupon shoppers. But as you noted, not all supermarkets take part.

Doubling tends to be a regional phenomenon. Some areas have it, others don't. When a store doubles a coupon, it is offering customers an additional incentive to shop there versus shopping at a competitor. But stores lose money when they offer these deals, so they're not always eager to do so.

No store has an obligation to double coupons. It's a powerful promotional tool retailers use to lure shoppers and keep them coming back. In less competitive markets, stores aren't likely to offer them.

Where I live in suburban Chicago, stores rarely double coupons. Some occasionally run promotions doubling five coupons on a certain day, usually with a $25 minimum purchase. I'll take what I can get, but doubling with restrictions is just that: restrictive.

A few years ago, a new grocery chain opened stores in our area. This chain operates stores in Indiana and Michigan, and doubles coupons in those states. But the chain doesn't double coupons in Chicago. Why not? Because the competitive situation in our market doesn't require it. The store was smart enough to look at the other two supermarket chains in Chicago; neither of them double coupons, so this new chain chose not to, either.

If stores in your area don't double coupons, don't fret. There are plenty of ways to save big with coupons, even without coupon promotions. If you do take advantage of coupon doubling, you might wonder the same thing this reader did.

DEAR JILL: Why do some coupons state, "Do not double?" If the store is paying to double the coupon, why should the company who makes the item care if it is doubled? — TAMARA H.

DEAR TAMARA: Manufacturers limit discounts for a couple of reasons. They might think of their product as high-end and not want it to look like a bargain buy.

The coupons you find on shelf tear pads and in automatic dispensers almost always state, "Do not double." This is to protect the store from taking a big hit on a particular offer given the hundreds of coupons right there for the taking. And while the store agreed to double coupons, they're banking on shoppers bringing in their own coupons, not redeeming half a dispenser at once. Putting "Do not double" on in-store coupons protects the store. When manufacturers want to place more dispensers on the shelves, they are happy to oblige.

MANGOS

FROM B1

1 orange, grated zest and the juice
1 large egg will beaten
1 cup of sugar
Grate the zest off of the fruit before getting the juice.

In a saucepan over medium heat, combine the zest and juice from the lemon, lime and orange. Add the beaten egg and sugar. Cook and stir constantly until the mixture comes just to a boil. Boil 1-2 minutes and still stir constantly. Remove from heat and cool completely. Pour dressing over the mixed fruits. Place in the refrigerator until time to serve.

MANGO ICE CREAM
2 cups of ripe mango, peeled and diced
1 1/2 cups of sugar
2 tablespoons of fresh lime juice
2 cups of milk
5 egg yolks
1 cup of whipping cream

Combine mango, 1/2 cup of sugar, and lime juice in a non metallic bowl. Cover and refrigerate for one hour. Make a custard by scalding the milk in a 2 quart saucepan. Whisk the egg yolks and 3/4 cup of sugar in a mixing bowl. Add the warm milk in a thin stream, slowly into the egg yolks and sugar. Keep stirring while adding the warm milk. Return the mixture to the pan and to the stove. Cook over medium heat, uncovered, stir and cook until thick enough to coat a wooden spoon. Do not let it boil. Cool. Stir the mango mixture into the cooled custard and stir in the cream. Taste for sweetness and add more sugar if desired. Freeze in an electric freezer according to freezer directions. Makes 1 1/2 quarts.

PAN-SEARED SALMON IN PEACH MANGO SAUCE
4 4 oz. salmon fillets, 3/4 inch thick vegetable cooking spray
1 large red bell pepper, chopped
1 clove of garlic, minced
1 1/2 cups of V1V-Fusion Peach Mango Juice
1 large mango peeled and chopped
1/4 cup of honey
2 tablespoons of cornstarch

1 tablespoon of lime juice
1/4 teaspoon of cracked black pepper
4 cups of baby spinach
2 tablespoons of chopped fresh cilantro leaves
2 cups of cooked regular brown rice

Season the salmon as desired. Spray a 12 inch skillet with the cooking spray and heat over medium high heat for one minute. Add the salmon, skin side up and cook for about 5 minutes or until it's well browned. Turn the salmon over and cook for 4 minutes or until it flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove the salmon from the skillet and keep it warm. Add the red pepper and garlic to the skillet and cook over medium heat until the pepper is tender crisp. Stir the juice, mango, honey, cornstarch, lime juice and black pepper in a small bowl. Stir the juice mixture and the spinach into the skillet. Cook for 2 minutes and let it boil and thicken. Stir in the cilantro and serve over the salmon. Serve with rice.

MANGO PORK
2 ripe mangoes
1 pork tenderloin, 3/4 lb.
cooking spray
salt and pepper to taste
hot pepper sauce

Put the pulp of one mango in a blender and puree.
Cut the other mango into small cubes. Trim pork tenderloin and slice into one inch thick medallions. Flatten slices lightly with hand. Spray a skillet or medium saucepan with cooking spray or add a small amount of olive oil and heat on medium high. Brown pork for one minute on each side. Season each side with salt and pepper to taste. Reduce heat and cook pork another five minutes to cook through. Remove to a plate and add mango puree to the skillet or saucepan. Cook puree about, scraping up brown bits of pork, for about 30 seconds. Add several drops of hot sauce and the mango cubes. Toss cubes in puree while heating through. Spoon sauce over pork and serve with pasta or hot cooked rice.

BOURBON MANGO PULLED PORK
2 mangos
14 lb. pork shoulder roast
2 tablespoons of black pepper

1 teaspoon of kosher salt
1 teaspoon of chipotle chile powder
1/4 cup of balsamic vinegar
2 cups of water
1 chopped onion
1 teaspoon of chipotle chile powder
3 teaspoons of honey
1/5 fluid oz. of bourbon
24 oz. of barbecue sauce

Peel the mangos and remove the pits. Place the pits into a slow cooker, then roughly chop the mango and set aside. Place the pork shoulder roast into the slow cooker and season with the black pepper, kosher salt, one teaspoon of chipotle chile powder, one chopped onion, balsamic vinegar and water. Cover and cook 8 hours until very tender. Drain the pork, discard the liquid, pits, and any fat or bone. Shred with a fork. Puree the chopped mango in a blender until smooth, then bring to a simmer. Add honey, one teaspoon of chipotle powder and whiskey. Simmer on medium low and stir often until the mango has reduced and darkened slightly. Takes about 10 minutes. Remove from heat and add the chopped pork roast. Add barbecue sauce and place all back into the crock pot and cook on high for 1-2 hours or until the pork absorbs the sauce.

MANGO MINI MUFFINS
1/2 cup of whole wheat flour
1/2 cup of all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons of toasted wheat germ
2 tablespoons of brown sugar, firmly packed
1/2 teaspoon of baking soda
1/8 teaspoon of salt
1/2 cup of ripe mashed mango
1 tablespoon plus 1 1/2 teaspoons of vegetable oil
1 egg beaten
1 tablespoon of skim milk
1 teaspoon of rum
1/4 teaspoon of coconut extract
1/4 teaspoon of almond extract

Combine the first six ingredients in a large bowl; make a well in the center of the mix. Combine mango, oil, egg, milk, rum and flavorings; add liquid to dry ingredients, stirring until dry ingredients are moistened. Spoon batter into the greased and floured mini muffin pans. Fill 3/4 full and bake at 359 degrees F for about 10-12 minutes. Let cool and remove from pan. Makes 18 mini muffins.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

NOW FOR THE GOOD NEWS!

The recommendation that people with diabetes schedule regular visits to the ophthalmologist and do their best to control blood sugar levels seems to be paying off. According to the most recent report, diabetes-related vision complications have declined significantly over the past 15 years. This is rather significant news in light of the fact that, while the number of adults with diabetes has risen, the proportion of adults with diabetes who reported vision impairment has decreased. The improvement can be attributed to better control of diabetes risk factors (such as blood glucose and blood pressure) and improved detection and treatment of diabetes-related eye problems (including glaucoma, cataracts, and retinopathy). It is heartening to see that education is paying off.

New medications and treatment strategies for the care and management of diabetic patients have decreased the complications of diabetes. As a result, kidney problems, vascular disease, neuropathy and diabetic retinopathy have been reduced. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we look forward to helping you understand your needs and providing information so you may make an informed decision regarding vision correction. # Car booster seats are right choice for small children

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a grandmother who has her 7-year-old grandson sit in a baby car seat when she's driving? The boy weighs 65 pounds and is 4 1/2 feet tall. His parents don't want to cause a rift with her, as she helps them after school. He looks ridiculous and must feel embarrassed in front of his friends. Should relatives intervene? — GRANNY'S NEIGHBOR

DEAR ABBY

DEAR NEIGHBOR: I took your question to a public affairs specialist with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. He said that children through the age of 12 should always ride in the back seat. He also reminded me that seat belts were designed for adults, not children. According to the NHTSA, the 7-year-old should be in a "booster" seat. A booster seat positions the seat belt so it fits properly over the shoulder and chest — the strongest parts of the child's body — so it won't cut him or her on the neck or face in case of an accident. The NHTSA used to recommend that children 8 to 12 years old or 4 feet 9 inches and under use a booster seat. However, it NOW recommends that parents visit its website, www.nhtsa.gov, to choose a correct seat. Click on the child safety section, and you'll find an area titled "Which Car Seat Is the Right One for Your Child." There are also videos in this section showing parents how to install the seats correctly. The recommendations are national and do not vary among the states. And yes — this information should be shared with the child's parents and the grandmother in order to ensure the boy's safety.

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 2, I was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes. I have been involved with the American Diabetes Association since I was 6. As its 2012 National Youth

Advocate, I'd like to invite your readers to join me by participating in the 24th Annual American Diabetes Association Alert Day tomorrow, March 27. Alert Day, held on the fourth Tuesday in March, is a one-day "wake-up call." On that day, the American public is invited to take the Diabetes Risk Test to find out if they are at risk for developing Type 2 diabetes. It's a serious disease that strikes nearly 26 million children and adults in the United States. Many of them don't know they have it. Unfortunately, people are often diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes seven to 10 years after it has settled in their system. By then, the major symptoms have already developed and harmed the body, so early diagnosis is critical. Please urge your readers to "Take it. Share it." Let them know they can protect their health and stop this disease by taking the free risk test. Just answer a few simple questions and share the fact with everyone you care about that there is a test. If they take it, they could be saving lives. — LOGAN NICOLE GREGORY, 2012 A.D.A. NATIONAL YOUTH ADVOCATE

DEAR LOGAN: Congratulations on your selection as the 2012 National Youth Advocate. Readers, because diabetes is a serious — but manageable — condition, and there are simple ways to find out if you could be at risk, please pay attention to Logan's message. Visit the American Diabetes Association Facebook page, go to stopdiabetes.com or call (800) 342-2383.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 26, the 86th day of 2012. There are 280 days left in the year.

HISTORY HIGHLIGHT

On March 26, 1982, groundbreaking ceremonies took place in Washington, D.C., for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

ON THIS DATE

In 1804, the Louisiana Purchase was divided into the Territory of Orleans and the District of Louisiana. In 1812, an earthquake devastated Caracas, Venezuela, causing an estimated 26,000 deaths, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. In 1827, composer Ludwig van Beethoven died in Vienna. In 1874, poet Robert Frost was born in San Francisco. In 1892, poet Walt Whitman died in Camden, N.J. In 1912, an explosion at the Jed Coal & Coke Co. Mine in West Virginia claimed the lives of 83 miners. In 1937, a 6-foot-tall statue of the cartoon character Popeye was unveiled during the Second Annual Spinach Festival in Crystal City, Texas. In 1958, the U.S. Army launched America's third successful satellite, Explorer 3. In 1962, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Baker v. Carr, gave federal courts the power to order reapportionment of states' legislative districts, a 6-2 decision that eventually led to the doctrine of "one man, one vote." In 1979, a peace treaty was signed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin (men-AH'-kem BAY'-gihn) and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and witnessed by President Jimmy Carter at the White House. In 1992, a judge in Indianapolis sentenced former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson to six years in prison for raping a Miss Black America contestant. (Tyson ended up serving three years.) In 1997, the bodies of 39 members of the Heaven's Gate techno-religious cult who'd committed suicide were found inside a rented mansion in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif. FIVE YEARS AGO The military concluded that high-ranking Army officers had made critical errors in reporting the friendly fire death of Army Ranger Pat Tillman in Afghanistan, but that there was no criminal wrongdoing in the shooting of the former NFL star by fellow soldiers. (The findings were rejected by Tillman's family.) Australian detainee David Hicks pleaded guilty before a military tribunal at Guantanamo to helping terrorists fight the United States in Afghanistan. (Hicks was sentenced to seven years in prison; all but nine months' prison time was suspended. Hicks was returned to Australia to serve out his term, and was freed in December 2007.) THOUGHT FOR TODAY "Life's like a play; it's not the length but the excellence of the acting that matters." — Seneca the Younger, Roman statesman and philosopher (3 B.C.-A.D. 65).

This artist rendering depicts a proposed aerial tramway that would ferry tourists from the cliff tops of the east rim of the Grand Canyon to the water's edge of the Colorado and Little Colorado Rivers below. The plan by the Navajo government is drawing opposition from the National Park Service, environmental groups and even some traditional Navajo herdsman in the area.

Grand Canyon eyed for development

NAVAJO NATION PROPOSAL SEEKS TO DEVELOP AREA THAT HAS BEEN LARGELY UNTOUCHED

FELICIA FONSECA
Associated Press

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. | Generations of Navajo families have grazed livestock on a remote but spectacular mesa that overlooks the confluence of the Colorado and Little Colorado rivers. This is the East Rim of the majestic Grand Canyon — the last with no significant development.

But ancestral tradition and the tranquility of the landscape could be subject to change if the Navajo government's plans are realized for a resort and aerial tramway that would ferry tourists from cliff tops to water's edge.

The vast 27,000 square-mile Navajo reservation abuts Grand Canyon National Park, and tribal leaders say they're losing out on tourist dollars and jobs for their people by leaving the land undeveloped. Navajo President Ben Shelly recently signed a nonbinding agreement that lists the gondola, a restaurant, a half-mile river walk, a resort hotel and spa and RV park among the attractions of a proposed development that he says will bring up to $70 million a year in revenue to the tribe and 2,000 jobs to the impoverished reservation.

"We want people from all over the world to visit Navajo land and the Grand Canyon," Shelly said. "We have many of the world's wonders in our midst." True enough, but the National Park Service already is voicing objections to the large-scale development on its eastern flank. Environmental organizations and some Navajos who call the area home also oppose the project.

"This is just one more thing that is going to chip away at the solitude of the area, and it's really not the appropriate type of development for that area," said Alicyn Gitlin of the Sierra Club.

Similar proposals for a tramway that would take tourists from the East Rim to the river have been opposed by the local community of Bodaway-Gap. They oppose the scale and character of the current plan and want more say in what could be built there.

The confluence, as locals call it, is a 100-mile drive off Interstate 40 from Flagstaff off a rough dirt road. Sagebrush, rolling hills, arroyos, canyons and desert mark the landscape where the Colorado meets the blue-green waters of the Little Colorado. It's mostly quiet, save for the occasional helicopter tour over the Grand Canyon or the shouts from river rafters below.

The land has remained undeveloped for decades because of a land dispute between the Navajos and the neighboring Hopi tribe, both of which claimed aboriginal ties to it. A construction ban implemented by former U.S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs Robert Bennett imposed a ban on home and land improvements in 1966. It was lifted in 2009, though little development has occurred on the 700,000 acres.

The western edge of the Grand Canyon outside the national park boundaries belongs to the Hualapai Tribe, which has a horseshoe-shaped glass bridge that juts out 70 feet over the canyon's edge and gives tourists a view of the Colorado River 4,000 feet below. Most people visiting the Grand Canyon go to the South Rim within the national park. The North Rim, also within the park, is less developed, but has a seasonal lodge. The memorandum of agreement that Shelly signed with the Confluence Partners, LLC., on Feb. 21 doesn't state the impacts of a development on the East Rim. But a member of the negotiating team, Deswood Tome, said the tribal government expects 3 million visitors a year as soon as 2015 and revenue to be between $40 million and $70 million annually — up to a half of the tribe's budget not including federal funds.

The bidding:
South 1♥ West Dble North 4♥ East Dble
Opening lead — king of diamonds.

A questionable bid can come back to haunt the perpetrator in many ways. It might, for example, cause the partnership to go overboard during the bidding, or to double an opposing contract that cannot be defeated. It might also lure partner into mis-defending during the play.

A case in point is this deal from the 1988 Spingold team championship. North-South were Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell, pitted against Norman Kay, West, and Edgar Kaplan, East.

After Rodwell had opened with one heart, Kay elected to make a light takeout double, no doubt influenced by the favorable vulnerability. When Meckstroth leaped to four hearts, Kaplan, holding the best hand at the table, expressed his doubt that declarer could make that contract.

Kay led the king of diamonds, and Kaplan overtook with the ace in order to shift to his singleton spade. He planned to split his trump honors when a heart was led from the table, win the next heart and then put Kay in with the ace of clubs to gain a spade ruff. These four tricks plus the king of clubs would yield a 500-point set.

But Kay did not have the ace that Kaplan thought he had to have for his double, and disaster ensued. After winning the spade return with dummy's king, Rodwell led a trump to the queen and ace, and conceded a trump to the king. Kaplan returned a club, but, unfortunately, Rodwell produced the ace.

Declarer drew the last trump, cashed the Q-A of spades and ruffed a spade. He then ruffed a diamond and discarded a club on dummy's established spade to make his contract for a score of 790 points.

Had Kaplan shifted to a club at trick two, as he no doubt would have without Kay's double, declarer would have had to lose two clubs, a heart and a diamond for down one.

At the other table, Kaplan-Kay's teammates, sitting North-South, defeated five diamonds doubled one trick for plus 100. Their team thus lost a net of 690 points instead of gaining 300, a swing of nearly 1,000 points on the play of just one card.

Tomorrow: A question of probabilities.
